

Cherian Varghese

World Health Organization (WHO), Geneva, Switzerland

Dr. Varghese works as the Coordinator for Management of Noncommunicable Diseases (NCDs) in the WHO Department for Management of Noncommunicable Diseases, Disability, Violence and Injury Prevention (NVI). He is responsible for the overall guidance and programme management related to NCD management, multi-sectoral plan development and research. He leads the area of integrated NCD management and is working on models of for populations at a district level. Dr. Cherian Varghese holds a medical degree with postgraduate qualification in Radiation Oncology from India, where he has also trained in health and hospital management. He also holds a Master of Philosophy from Cambridge, United Kingdom, and a Ph.D. from Tampere, Finland in Cancer Epidemiology. He has worked in clinical oncology and epidemiology in India, cancer research in Leeds, UK, and has been with WHO since 2001 at the country, regional and global levels. He has published over 70 articles in the field of NCDs.